

Expect British To Spurn Briand Alliance Plea

French Are Expected to Get Taste of Self-Inflicted Isolation at Cannes

WILL TALK REPARATIONS

Resumption of Trade With Germany and Russia Will Be Up for Discussion

By United Press Leased Wire
Cannes, France—European history of the next few years will be made in the making here, it is expected.

With the arrival of Premier Briand of France, in a blinding snowstorm which blotted out the beauties of the rivieras, delegates to the Cannes conference laid aside the frivolity that has marked the week, and serious preliminary conversations were begun.

Before the supreme council meets, Briand will urge upon Lloyd George the necessity for a military and political alliance between France and Great Britain. The French premier, it was learned upon his arrival here, considers this the best method of solving many post war difficulties, also of allaying England's anxiety regarding France's naval and military necessities.

The fate of the French cabinet and of Anglo-French relations were considered by observers to be in the balance as the supreme council meeting got under way.

Three propositions were brought to Cannes by Premier Briand:

1. He will seek to limit the supreme council's discussions to questions of reparations and the economic reconstruction of Europe.
2. France has a proposal for accepting German payments on terms more favorable to Germany.
3. Briand will seek to bring about some form of Anglo-French alliance.

In each of these three projects, it is believed Briand will be opposed by the British.

Lloyd George with whom the French premier entered into private conversation shortly after his arrival Wednesday, is known to favor economic aid to Russia and Germany as a subject for the council's deliberations.

France's attitude toward Germany opened to British goods. The British premier also will oppose Briand's proposals regarding reparations, and will have his country behind him in rejecting any offer of an alliance with France. The attitude of the British delegates at Washington, is felt to have weakened her position. She has only Belgium to support her views, it is said.

Briand's personal fate is believed to be in the balance. He and his cabinet must certainly go, observers say. French political circles are expected to put across the French viewpoint here. And the odds are against Briand.

Whatever she gains from the conference, France is certain to pay the penalty for her recalcitrance at Washington and taste the first bitter fruits of the isolation she established for herself. British here declare an emphatic "no" is ready for Briand's proposal for an alliance.

PENROSE FUNERAL MAY BE THURSDAY

By United Press Leased Wire
Philadelphia—Simple funeral services for Senator Boies Penrose will be held here Wednesday afternoon or Thursday, it was rumored Wednesday. The family maintains secrecy.

Spencer Penrose, brother of the late senator, arrived here from Colorado Springs Wednesday, and plans had been delayed pending his arrival. It was understood that the funeral which is to be private, would be held at once.

The body will be cremated and the ashes placed in Laurel Hill cemetery, it was also rumored.

HAS NEW CLEWS TO MURDER OF SINGER

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—That the solution of the mysterious murder of Herman Singer, wealthy Madison barber, whose body was found in a stone quarry at Sunset Point in August, 1920, might possibly be found here, is the opinion of Harry Southoff.

Southoff was district attorney for Dane co. at the time the body was found. He visited the police here Tuesday to present clues that have recently developed in Madison.

Hard Times Make Cupid Take Flight

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—The marriage market took a slump here during 1921, according to officials.

In 1920, 6,019 licenses were issued, while in 1921 only 5,124 were issued. The slump was attributed to the general business depression.

Jack Pickford Denies He Is Wed To Actress

By United Press Leased Wire
Los Angeles—"I will sue any one who says I am married to Marilyn Miller," Jack Pickford, brother of the famous Mary, thus emphatically denied Wednesday reports that he and the star of "Sally," New York musical comedy, had been married for three weeks.

Pickford denounced as absolutely false the reports which have come to the Hollywood motion picture colony that he and the Broadway star "eloped" to a little Connecticut town and were married; and that he came to Hollywood after Florenz Ziegfeld theatrical producer, strenuously objected to the marriage.

"That's absurd," Pickford said. "I will sue any one who prints that story. Certainly I haven't married Miss Miller. I'm not engaged to her. I don't think she is engaged to any one."

Pickford also asserted he had no intention of marrying Miss Miller.

MISS MILLER SAYS NO
New York—Broadway was full of rumors Wednesday that Jack Pickford had married Marilyn Miller.

"I am not married to him," Miss Miller insisted. "I am not engaged to him. I have no intention of becoming engaged to him or of marrying him."

Florenz Ziegfeld, producer of "Sally," in which Miss Miller stars, declared he had heard nothing of the reported romance.

So far as I know they are not married," he said, "and they won't be during the life of Miss Miller's contract."

PERSONAL PLEA IS NEWBERRY'S ONLY HOPE NOW

Failure to Move Senators in Coming Speech Will Mean Denial of Seat

By Lawrence Martin
Washington—Truman H. Newberry of Michigan Wednesday held his senatorial fate in his own hands.

His own defense before the senate against charges of too lavish expenditure in connection with his election probably will decide whether he remains or loses his seat.

Half a dozen senators will determine the issue. If Newberry convinces them with his defense, which he is now preparing, he will keep his place. If his personal appeal to the senate fails, he will be ousted.

Newberry's defense "managers" who have seen the speech he will deliver in person to the senate late this week or early next, predicted Wednesday the mere fact that he defends himself will satisfy "doubtful" senators. There were indications, however, that some of those who insisted he must defend himself want more than a mere perfunctory answer to charges.

Meantime it is becoming apparent to the senate that the country feels more deeply about the Newberry matter than either the Republican or Democratic leaders suspected.

A bill revising the corrupt practices act so that a candidate for the United States senate must have written acknowledgment of all money spent in his behalf, was introduced in the house Wednesday by Representative Cabel, Ohio, Republican. The measure is designed to prevent a repetition of the Newberry case.

RAILROADS TO PREPARE FOR BOOM IN TRADE

Heavy Orders are Placed for Equipment to Handle Expected Increase

Chicago—Middlewestern railroads Wednesday prepared for a business boom.

Anticipating an increase in the volume of freight when the expected commercial revival comes, carriers ordered large supplies of new equipment.

The Chicago Burlington & Quincy railroad authorized the purchase of 500 stock cars, 1,300 refrigerator cars, 2,500 box cars and 3,000 composite coal cars.

The Illinois Central announced that delivery of 1,000 new refrigerator cars was expected.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway company has an order entered for 2,500 coal cars.

Officials of the Chicago & North-western announced that plans are being made in line with other railways to order a large supply of rolling stock.

INJECT WILSON DOCTRINE INTO TREATY FIGHT

Bipartisan Opponents of Four-Power Pact Want Alliance With All Nations

OPPOSE BALANCE OF POWER

French Seek Pact With Great Britain Before Entering Other Agreements

By David Lawrence
Washington—An alliance of all or most of the nations of the world reflects the attitude of a bipartisan coalition whose principal object will be the defeat, if possible, of any treaties which set up the United States as a potential foe or opponent of any group of nations. The issue is not as much the balance of power as the philosophy of the treaties now being drafted at the arms conference but the broad principle. Senator Borah on the Republican side has fired the opening gun by demanding that the United States shall not enter an alliance with three other nations for the protection of certain rights in the Pacific as against another group of nations which are admittedly weak. On the Democratic side the influence of former President Wilson is beginning to be felt in the revival of the doctrine he preached on his last trip to Europe. A Clarendon speech from the famous Manchester speech delivered by Mr. Wilson as a reply to Premier Clemenceau's first thrust against the League of Nations idea is being circulated among Democratic senators who are being urged to use this issue of balance of power as a means of fighting the new treaty policy on which the United States has embarked.

WILSON OPPOSED FRANCE
There is a curious parallel between the situation that exists today at the arms conference between Premier Briand on the one hand and the American-British delegations on the other, and the situation that prevailed in January, 1919, when Woodrow Wilson had the support of Prime Minister Lloyd George and the British delegation and found himself opposed by the French. Mr. Clemenceau was demanding a defensive alliance as the best insurance of peace in Europe. Mr. Wilson fought the idea but finally agreed to submit to the American senate such a pact, feeling that it would "reasonably be rejected" and considered an American tradition which has always opposed special alliances of a military character. The news Tuesday from Europe, particularly the interview given by Premier Briand to a London Daily Mail correspondent in Paris, reveals that the French have not given up hope of getting a defensive

LIQUOR FLOOD IS DWINDLING IN U.S., NICHOLSON SAYS

Head of Anti-Saloon League Says Country Now is 75 Per Cent Dry

By United Press Leased Wire
Chicago—Prohibition is effective in at least 75 per cent of the United States.

Outside of the larger cities from 85 to 90 per cent of the area of the country is dry.

This is the situation after two years of national prohibition as pictured by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, president of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in an interview with the United Press Wednesday.

"Prohibition is rapidly gaining in the United States," said Bishop Nicholson.

Reports of increased number of stills and of the increase in the manufacture of home brew, he stated, were propaganda spread by the wet interests in an effort to have the people repeat the old story.

"An investigation recently made shows that the consumption of liquor is rapidly decreasing," he said. "Out of the larger cities we find very little effort to evade the law."

"The action of Chicago police in cleaning up the saloons is an excellent example with the trend all over the country. The national administration is making a consistent effort toward law enforcement."

According to the bishop reports from all parts of the country since prohibition became effective show large increases in bank deposits and savings, shorter delinquent tax lists and a large decrease in arrests for drunkenness.

NOOSE STILL ON NECKS OF DEAD SOLDIERS

Senate Committee Hears How Thirsty Soldier Was Killed by Guard

Washington—American soldiers were hanged in France and their bodies sent home to the United States with the hangman's "black cap" still over their heads, the senate investigating committee was told Wednesday by Rufus P. Hubbard of New York.

Hubbard, formerly with the army graves registration service, said he came across the bodies of three beheaded privates at the Bazelles cemetery in France around Jan. 1, 1921.

"The ropes were still around their necks and the black caps still over their heads," Hubbard declared. "We sent the bodies just that way to the soldiers' homes in the United States."

Hubbard said he thought two of the soldiers were negroes and the other white. He gave his address as 507 West 169th st.

Alleged cold blooded shootings of two American soldiers in France one by a private at the direction of an officer and the other by a lieutenant, were described Wednesday by Polk Golden, Newman G. Fortner soldier, before the committee.

Golden swore he witnessed both shootings.

One of the soldiers, Golden charged, was shot by a guard, an officer's command, because he started for a spring to get a drink of water. He had gone without a drink for 21 hours, Golden said.

The other soldier, the witness declared, was shot down by a lieutenant because he had struggled behind in a march.

"We were on the way from St. Mihiel into the Argonne sector when the first shooting occurred," Golden said. "We had gone for 24 hours without water when we stopped to rest near a spring. Guards were posted to keep the men from going to the spring but one man took his canteen and said he was going away. He started out and when he was about to halt, the guard shot him."

ADVANCE $15,000,000 TO ASSIST FARMERS

Washington—The war finance corporation Tuesday announced the granting of 255 additional advances for agricultural and livestock purposes in the south and west, aggregating $9,359,000. This brings the total advances for the week to $15,000,000.

Chicago Dads Want Help In Beer Fight

By United Press Leased Wire
Chicago—Chicago's city council Wednesday sent a resolution to every city over 25,000 in population asking backing in a fight for "wholesome" wines and beer.

During debate on the resolution the leader of the dries, Alderman John H. Lyle and Alderman John Toman, wet adherent, engaged in a fist fight.

HAYS WAVERS IN DECISION ON MOVIE OFFER

Proffered Position Attracts but He Feels Duty to Harding and Postoffice

Washington—Postmaster General Hays is personally disposed toward accepting the offer to become head of the motion picture industry of America, although his final decision still is under consideration, it was learned authoritatively on Wednesday.

While the offer of a three-year contract at $100,000 a year, exclusive of all income taxes is admittedly appealing, Hays does not want to make a move at this time which might be construed as a desertion of the Harding administration.

He is also in the midst of working out a number of policies in the post office department which he wants to see realized before he leaves the only job for which he has been elected.

Whether these policies will be carried out if he resigns is understood to be the question on which his decision is hanging.

CALLS ON HARDING
Hays spent two hours at the White house on his return here Tuesday, and he will hold another conference with the president within the next few days.

President Harding is said to be reluctant to have his cabinet disarranged so soon after the beginning of his administration but Hays has assured that no obstacle in the way of a resignation if Hays decides upon that course.

Hays is attracted by the educational feature of the proposed job. The movie industry, now fourth in the United States, offers optional education in the national work yet scarcely touched, he thinks.

Speculation as to the next postmaster general in event Hays resigns is already being widely indulged in here. William Boyce Thompson of New York, a close friend of Hays and prominent in the Republican party, is mentioned as a possibility. Others whose names are being discussed include Senator Harry New, Indiana; Fred W. Upham, Chicago, treasurer of the Republican national committee; John T. Adams, who succeeded Hays as chairman of the national committee; and John T. King, former national committeeman of Connecticut.

While it has been previously indicated that the French would make their acceptance of the Root proposal conditional upon an agreement that merchant ships should not be armed, the British spokesman said his group and the Americans now understood that such a string was not attached, though he could not announce that with absolute positiveness.

The Japanese and Italians, so far as the British dispatch was informed, had not yet received a reply on the Root resolution.

As for the 10,000 ton limit for cruisers, it was said that no difficulty is anticipated on that score. France evidently having acquiesced, the conference, the tariff committee, it was announced, had agreed upon an effective five per cent customs rate for the Chinese to be put into operation by the permanent tariff board in China.

CHURCH WOMEN FAIL TO CONVICT RESORT OWNER

By United Press Leased Wire
Oconomowoc—The Milwaukee Federated Church Women lost the first fight in the Okauchee lake vice charges when a jury here Tuesday acquitted Reinold Schott, proprietor of Eagle hotel, Okauchee, Lake, of violating the gambling law.

Schott was charged with having operated slot machines in his hotel. He denied having the machines and also refuted charges of having permitted gambling in his place.

DRY OFFICER IS HELD FOR ASSAULT

Annen, Implicated in Wurzer Shooting, in Trouble After New Year Raid

By United Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee—As the result of a New Year's eve raid, a warrant was sworn out Thursday for the arrest of Nicholas Annen, prohibition officer, charged with assault and battery. The complaint was sworn to by Benjamin Watson, who charges that two men dressed as railroaders, halted him and two companions on the street and started searching their persons for liquor.

Watson claims the men without identifying themselves started the search and when he refused to submit, was struck in the face. A fight ensued, which drew the attention of a policeman and the men were taken to police headquarters, where after questioning they were all released.

The companion of Annen was said to have been William Loos, a "thief" among the dry agents, who took part in a raid at Antigo, in which Joe Wurzer was shot and killed.

Young Men's Ears Must Be Burning As Flappers Review Their Failings

More Letters From Girls Who Don't Think Much of Men of Today as Material for Husbands—
All Slap at Cigaret Smoking

Many letters are coming to the contest editor condemning the modern young man, but as yet not one letter has come defending him and justifying him as a husband and father. From the letters which come to the Post-Crescent it is evident that there will be few "marriages of respect" such as there are in Europe where it is as common for girls to marry men whom they respect because of their positions and families as for them to marry the men whom they actually love.

In order not to have this contest one sided some girls in Appleton who really are convinced that the modern young man is no worse and in many respects better than the men of the past generation should write and defend them. Most every letter which comes in carries with it some condemnation of cigarette smoking, the girls accuse the men of being unchivalrous and impolite and generally unfit to marry.

One young girl from the country writes: "Dear Editor—The present generation of young men is not fit to sit in the same room with the women and girls of today. Just a week ago, while attending a social, young men began smoking cigarettes. They were asked to discontinue smoking them, but insisted on doing so.

"And what decent young lady would want to be seen in company with young men known to have been attending such degrading Sunday dancing as takes place at resorts and the beaches and coming home in the wee hours of the morning? This is the way with 99 per cent of the young men of today.

"Not long ago a young doctor was heard to make unkind remarks about a woman patient. This doctor has a wife and children. What will they grow up to be with such a degrading father? Who wants to employ such a doctor?

Having never seen many truthful, clean, self respecting young men, it would be difficult to say just what I would expect my husband to be, but would wish him to be clean in mind and body and an abstainer from intoxicants as well as cigarette smoking.

"Country Girl."
And a university freshman writes: "Dear Editor—Your contest follows right along in the problem which has been bothering me since the first month at a university in a nearby state. When I was in high school, every university student seemed to me a hero and a polished gentleman.

When I chanced to dance with one, I was too thrilled even to speak, and when I thought of going to school where hundreds of such men attended, my heart fairly stopped beating.

"After four months of university life, I have seen enough to make me despair of ever finding a man whom I want to marry. Most of the men whom I have met are what are known as 'ten hounds' and 'lounge lizards.' They may make good dance partners and be invaluable to a hostess who wishes to have her guests amused, but what man, whose brains are all in his feet will make a good husband?

"These so-called students are supposed to be preparing for their place in the world. Well, if their places in the world are comparable to their places in scholastic circles, I prefer to get all I can out of my university work, prepare for a career and have a more certain and profitable future than any of these men can offer me.

"Cocod."
And still another from a business girl: "Dear Editor: Now, let's be frank about this husband business. I am looking for a husband, have been ever since I finished my short business course. I do not deny that I want to marry because I consider it the biggest thing in life providing you find a congenial mate who can provide necessary comforts without eternal grumbings about extravagances and bills.

"You know that business is not all that it is cracked up to be. This pulling yourself out of bed every morning and hurrying to get into business clothes and then spending the rest of the day being pleasant is not all roses. Don't you long sometimes for an extra hour of sleep in the morning and your own sweet time in which to do things? Most married women have this advantage, but look at the men they have to live with!

"I am going to keep right on climbing in my job until I find a man who is interested in something besides cheap shows, dancing to jazz music, the respective merits of this pool shack or that, the best way to worry through the day without doing much work, and smoking package after package of cigarettes. When the man who meets my requirements comes along, I am going to marry him so quickly that it will make his head swim.

"Business Girl."

You're Not In The Swim Unless You Paint Weeds

Painted winter bouquets are quite the rage in Appleton.

If you are a faddist and haven't a winter bouquet in your home—well you're no faddist because winter bouquets are the latest fad. This fad crept gradually from the east and invaded Appleton a year ago but it was not extensively followed until this year.

Now in a majority of homes, autumn foliage and plain ordinary weeds are displayed in most radiant colors. Milk weeds, mullen stalks and oak leaves flaunt themselves in various shades of bronze, dabs of gold, touches of gold, touches of henna, silver, cerise and Harding blue.

Decorating the humble wayside growths has become a hobby with many women and even a few men with artistic leanings have been enamored by the new art. In fact, many of these persons not satisfied with merely decorating a bouquet for themselves, are now turning their attentions to tasteful bouquets for others.

The new art is just as long as the kind Longfellow wrote about. Moreover it is mussy and many homes are in a general state of litter from it. Spare and sacred pieces of furniture such as father's writing desk and mother's dressing table have been commandeered by the weed artist in her relentless attempts to create a distinct masterpiece of many colors.

So if you haven't a winter bouquet in your home and still insist you believe in fads, its time you were busy. It's easy enough to get the paints but you may have trouble to get the weeds—until next autumn.

BLAME BOARD WHEN ROADS DRIFT SHUT

Motor truck drivers who have occasion to make trips into the county claim some of the roads are almost impassable including certain trunk highways on which no work has been done to keep them open. The chances are the present snow storm will blockade them completely. The county board is being severely criticized for not providing an appropriation for keeping them open at the annual session in November and it is understood the matter will be taken up at the special session Wednesday afternoon. Both Winnebago and Brown-ros. are keeping their highways open up to the boundary line of Outagamie-co. and the need of this county taking similar action is very urgent. The only fund at present available is about $1,200 which was left over from last year.

DENVER ESCAPES BAD TIMES IN BUSINESS

William Roemer, a former Appleton boy who was engaged in the lumber business in Detroit for several years, with his wife, has returned from a several weeks' visit in Denver. He says that city is just beginning to feel the business depression which struck this section of the country a year ago. During the year Denver, he said, was exceedingly quiet, but experienced a boom after the armistice was signed and prospered as few cities in the west. Prices soared until of late and the work of readjustment is now going on in business circles.

COLLEGE DEBATE SQUAD SCHEDULES TRIP THRU WEST

Preparations Are Being Made for Busy Year in Forensic Circles

The negative debate team of Lawrence college will make a western tour during the latter part of March according to an announcement at the college Wednesday. Contracts have already been signed for four debates to take place in the west during 10-day tour. Colleges with which contracts have been signed are: Minnesota at St. Paul, Minn., Mar. 18; Dakota Wesleyan at Mitchell, S. D., Mar. 21; Nebraska Wesleyan at Lincoln, Neb., Mar. 23; Colorado college at Colorado Springs, Mar. 25.

There is a possibility that the team will also debate at Monmouth college, Monmouth, Ill., but the date has not been definitely arranged. Several other colleges asked to be considered in the western tour but satisfactory dates could not be arranged this year. These colleges probably will be included in the trip next year which is now being planned to the coast.

A triangle debate has been arranged with Albion and Cornell colleges for March 3. Albion college will send a team here and a Lawrence team will go to Cornell at Mt. Vernon, Iowa. The question for debate is: Resolved, that the closed shop in industry is justifiable.

The 12 men who were chosen for debate at the tryouts in December are working hard in preparation for the second trial which will take place in the old chapel of Main hall Tuesday, Jan. 10. At that time, eight men will be chosen from the 12 picked earlier in the season.

COLLEGE RECEIVES $2,500 FROM ESTATE

Lawrence college benefits to the amount of $2,500 under the terms of the will of the late Mrs. Frances J. Edwards of Port Edwards who died several weeks ago.

The value of the estate is estimated at $225,000. Several thousand dollars is bequeathed to the Methodist church in Wisconsin Rapids. After all bequests are deducted, the remainder of the estate goes to Mrs. J. M. Alexander of Port Edwards, a daughter of the deceased. L. M. Alexander and Mrs. Lida Edwards were nominated executor and executrix in the will.

U. S. OFFERS NEW PLAN TO SOLDIERS

Many disabled soldiers throughout the country are taking advantage of the new plan of enrolling in government schools for vocational training according to information received here.

Under the new plan the government is establishing special schools to give vocational training to soldiers. Until now the plan has been to enroll the soldiers in regular schools and the government paid their tuition.

Just recently a government vocational school has been opened at Chillicothe, Ohio, and will accommodate 5,000 students. An official party from Washington attended the opening of the school. Those in the party were Col. Charles R. Forbes, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, Mrs. Carolyn Betaw President Harding's sister, and Maj. A. J. Dean, assistant director of the bureau in charge of vocational rehabilitation.

Several additional schools will be opened soon in other parts of the country. So far 500 men have enrolled in the school at Chillicothe.

Gas and Acid Conditions
Due to Indigestion

Simply Chew a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Meals—They Taste Good

No matter what you eat or drink, even though it be just a glass of sweet milk, the stomach may rebel and sour almost immediately. In such cases one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets furnish the alkaline effort to offset the acid condition. Quite often the stomach may be overcrowded with partially digested food. A cold bottle of beverage at such times may add to the difficulty and there is gasiness, a bilious taste, and other distresses due to indigestion. Travelers may save themselves much of the discomfort of wayside eating by having a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with them as they can be had in almost any drug store throughout the U. S. and Canada.

A WRONG ATTACK ON LAFOLLETTE

We read in Washington dispatches that the administration is engaged in the pleasant task of laying on the rod to Senator LaFollette because of alleged irregularities and his hostility to President Harding. We fail to see by what right the administration assumes to judge Senator LaFollette, withhold from him patronage for Wisconsin that is his and divert it to Senator Lenroot. Mr. LaFollette has a right to resent this with all his might and conscience.

Mr. LaFollette not only represents the Republican party in Wisconsin, but is the Republican party. Any person or any group in Wisconsin out of step with the Senator is out of step with the party. Mr. LaFollette and his personally selected delegation represented Wisconsin in the Republican National Convention last year. He and his organization nominated and elected the present governor of Wisconsin, wrote the platform that binds the Republican party in Wisconsin and is admittedly in complete control of the party machinery in this state.

It is not a question of agreeing or disagreeing with Mr. LaFollette's political views, with his acts, his speeches or his policies. It is simply a question of accepting what is Republican doctrine and Republican will in the state of Wisconsin. This doctrine and this will are personified in Robert M. LaFollette and neither the national Republican organization nor President Harding himself has a right to exclude Mr. LaFollette from the party council or party patronage on the ground that he is not a Republican or that he is betraying Republican principles. Mr. LaFollette is the heart and soul of Republicanism in Wisconsin. If the Republicanism of this state differs essentially from that of other states or of the country at large, this is another matter. We have yet to hear, however, of a candidate for president refusing the electoral vote of Republican Wisconsin or of breaking with Mr. LaFollette at election time.

In choosing to ally himself with Senator Lenroot, President Harding has misjudged the state of Wisconsin. This he will discover when LaFollette comes up for reelection and his title to the Republican leadership of this state is again confirmed. Mr. LaFollette takes punishment well, and he also knows how to retaliate. If he lives he will be a Republican chieftain long after Mr. Harding returns to private life. Since Republicanism means one thing in California, another in New York, still another in Washington and yet one more in Wisconsin, it is up to the president to recognize Mr. LaFollette's title and the prerogatives that go with it. It is wholly unfair to discriminate against him on grounds of irregularity or disloyalty.

THE RAILROADS, FREIGHT RATES AND THE PUBLIC

Railroad executives have always been a little prone to underestimate public opinion and the force of that opinion as a factor in their business. If we go to the bottom of railway troubles in this country we will find that this psychology explains the beginning of the antagonism between the people and the railroads, the hostility of legislatures and of congress towards them in past years, of policies which in their ultimate results have brought bankruptcy and chaos into the railroad world.

This fact is again manifesting itself today. Instead of endeavoring to organize and direct the transportation business to meet public demand, the railroads are for the most part resisting these demands, while at the same time they are blaming the laws, labor unions, and politics for the difficulties that stand between them and a return to prosperous operation. There is a nationwide sentiment in favor of marked decreases in freight rates. If the railroads only knew it, it is a mighty and irresistible sentiment, and in the end it must be acceded to. Everywhere the railroads are criticized and hostile feeling is being engendered because of what the public regard as exorbitant freight rates. Efforts of the administration to reduce rates, and applications before the Interstate Commerce commission for this purpose are resisted.

Now the railroad operators, if they know anything at all about what is before them, know that freight rates must and will come down. Furthermore, they know that they can be brought down substantially and the railroad business conducted at a profit. The main question is not one of rates at all, but of volume. Sufficient traffic at lower rates will net the railroads much larger earnings than they are now receiving. Excessive freight rates are one of the great obstacles, if not the only real obstacle, to a reinstatement of that volume of traffic which can be handled most efficiently and most economically, and with the largest measure of returns to the railroad owners. In some respects the attitude of the railroad amounts to indifference to the commercial necessities of the country.

When the farmers complained some months ago that exorbitant freight rates prohibited shipments of produce to the markets, and caused them a great loss through waste and depreciation, some of the rail executives attempted to compile statistics showing the necessities of high rates. Needless to say these statistics were not convincing then and they are not convincing now. Manufacturers and business men are undergoing the same experiences the farmers underwent. In many instances traffic charges prevent the movement of certain kinds of commodities and merchandise. In some cases they are virtually confiscatory, being almost as much, or as much as the value of the commodity itself.

We have had liquidations in almost every field of industry and commerce but we have not had it in the railroad business. It is now time for the railroads to liquidate by reducing rates. There is absolutely no other alternative and they may as well face the necessity now as later, for the sooner they do the sooner they will be instrumental in promoting commercial activities. The longer they put it off, or the longer they resist the demand the greater will be the misunderstanding between the railroads and the public, a circumstance which in itself is unfortunate and which always reacts to the detriment and injury of the railroads.

CHILE-PERU'S ALSACE-LORRAINE

There must be a friendly way to settle the dispute between Chile and Peru concerning the provinces of Taena and Arica, and it is commendable of these two South American countries to take steps for adjustment through arbitration. That a quarrel or difference should continue indefinitely between two governments over the title to territory or the lines of territorial boundary is just as unreasonable as that two neighbors should hate each other and go on fussing over a fence or a property division. Such matters are largely ones of fact or record, and if there is variant for difference of opinion compromise offers the solution. It will between France and Germany over the ownership of Alsace and Lorraine is a practical lesson to Chile and Peru. It is well that the question is to be settled either by direct agreement or by arbitration.

UNLOCKING INTERLOCKING DIRECTORATES

By order of the Interstate Commerce commission it will be necessary for William Rockefeller, Harold S. Vanderbilt and George P. Baker to relinquish by the end of this year certain directorships which they now hold in competing or connecting railroads. The commission has designated which offices these men may choose.

Interlocking directorates were one of the devices by which capital used to control competing and connecting lines and shape the affairs of these properties to suit its special interest. To manipulate a carrier's destiny it was sufficient to dominate it, often secretly, through the board of directors. Nowadays, the commission takes steps to protect the interests of stockholders and the public.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writers' names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual case cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

EASIER ON THE ARTERIES

The medical sage who first sprang that hackneyed adage about a man being as old as his arteries lived in an era when feeling the pulse and looking at the tongue comprised a thorough physical examination. Those were the happy days for the "diagnostician" or "consulting physician," for, with the proper command of personality, dignity or front, he had only to "pronounce" the trouble there and so, and that was final and authoritative, since nobody had the temerity to dispute him short of autopsy, and autopsies were mighty unpopular even then.

Nowadays diagnosis has arrived at a stage considerably in advance of mere professional opinion. There are no longer any great diagnosticians or consulting physicians except a few gods of high society still left over here and there. Diagnosis comes pretty nearly being an exact science today. There are plenty of pathological conditions which are set deep mysteries to the physicians and everybody else on earth; and there are plenty of new diseases or morbid states appearing as fast as the unknown find new ways to defy the laws of God or nature.

The modern art of diagnosis is no one man or one mind job. It involves the clinical group plan—a group of men, each with more or less special training in his own field. And such reputation or fame as a physician may acquire in diagnosis these days finds him almost invariably a mere unit of such a team.

I'm sorry this is so. Nobody regrets rampant specialization in medicine and the commercialization toward which it leads, more than I do. In fact I have perhaps given a wrong impression by some of my allusions to the specialist—a good specialist in time of special need is a great blessing.

Modern group diagnosis costs a reasonable sum in comparison with the ridiculous stipends of the old time "consulting physician." Modern automobiles cost more than the old buggy. There isn't a chance for a job at the doctors here, either. How much or how little do you value health, anyway?

But the arteries—I had forgotten the pulse, and if the artery was at all hardened of course he noted that fact. But his practiced fingers, his wonderful touch and all that sort of thing, could not detect senility of the other tissues, tho it was there as certainly as it was in the arteries. A man is as old as his veins, bones, muscles, skin, lungs, heart and other things. Why fret about the arteries? They're hardly a kind of luxury. A better one is this: Can you roll six somersaults night and morning without seeing stars, your last meal or a doctor? If you can you're no old one. Then if you can turn about and roll 'em backward, too, rest assured you're young yet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Damp Family

1. Please publish the formula you printed some time ago for excessive or odoriferous perspiration under the arms. I used it and found it most effective, and have had no further trouble till now. Unfortunately I have lost the clipping. 2. What causes my husband's eyes to water as soon as he goes out in the cold? 3. What do you advise for a boy who wets the bed? 4. Is there danger to health if we get into a house in winter and find a person living in the house?—M. T. A.

Answer—1. Dissolve half an ounce of aluminum chloride in three ounces of rain water or distilled water, and mop the solution on the skin once each alternate day for three or four times, allowing it to dry before dressing. 2. I don't know. 3. Send for a regimen for the control of bedwetting, which is too long to print here. 4. Water in the cellar has no effect on the health of occupants of the house. Wet or dampness is sometimes disagreeable, but never causes sickness.

Embargo on Symptoms

You once published a list of symptoms by which tuberculosis of the lungs might be detected. Please forward the same to me.—(M. F.)

Answer—I do not publish symptoms. They are misleading. Tuberculosis of the lungs may be detected by examination by the physician. I earnestly advise you not to enter upon a study of symptoms, for it can do you nothing but harm. Leave that for your doctor—and don't procrastinate about seeing the doctor. The time to consult the physician for the happiest results, is the moment you feel any doubt about your state of health.

Half Hose

Is a child wearing half hose in the winter time liable to rheumatism or other diseases because of this exposure? Would long stockings be better? The child does not complain that her knees are cold and her mother says the child's feet keep warm this winter, tho they never did other winters when she wore long stockings.—(S. A. W.)

Answer—Such dress, if the child feels comfortable so dressed, rather tends to make her less susceptible to disease. You may always rely on this principle: The less one wears at any time and under any circumstances, with due regard for personal comfort, the healthier one will remain.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

Interpreting the New Treaty

"Quite the most extraordinary chapter in the diplomatic history of the United States," in the opinion of the NEW YORK WORLD (Dem.) are the differing interpretations given the new Four-Power treaty by the President and by his representatives who negotiated it. Speaking to newspaper men at an afternoon meeting, President Harding gave it as his opinion that this treaty "would no more apply to Japan than to the mainland of the United States." The islands of Japan proper constitute the domain of a party to the pact. Immediately after this statement was made public the American delegates called upon the President and the LYNCHBURG (Va.) NEWS (Dem.) ventures to guess, told him "that he did not know what he was talking about and that he was playing the deuce with the situation."

Quite apart from any discussion at the point at issue, the actual territorial guaranty given Japan—about which debate is raging furiously—the feeling is strong that, as the CHICAGO TRIBUNE (C.) NEWS AND COURIER (Dem.) puts it, this disagreement between the President and the American delegation as to the meaning of the treaty is the "worst thing that could happen to the Arms Conference." For it suggests to many editors secret diplomacy of the most dangerous kind, shakes public confidence and sets Senators and the people generally to looking for "jokers" in all the conference proceedings, and will, moreover, endanger the passage of the treaty itself.

That the President's interpretation of the treaty is the natural one the SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN (Ind.) thinks. It is shown by the fact that it was the opinion of many of the people "a hundred" until "the belated revelation of the inclusion of Japan" was officially made, and the LOUISVILLE POST (Ind.) believes that "when Mr. Harding put out his construction of the treaty he had not the faintest idea that it would prove divergent from that of his Secretary of State." Indeed, nothing would have come of it had not the REPUBLICAN PITTSBURGH CHRONICLE TELEGRAPH declares, had not "a few, a very few Democratic newspapers and near-statenmen" attempted to make political capital of it by "eagerly seizing upon what they fancied was the chance to discredit the President and impede the progress of the conference with their imputations of a lack of harmony between the executive and his appointees."

But to the NEWARK NEWS (Ind.) "the only explanation of the incident that would absolve the President is that the American delegation has misled him," and this, in the general view, is precisely what has happened. "What was the result?" asks the HARRISBURG PATRIOT (Ind. Dem.) asks, "when the man who called the Arms Conference and appointed the American delegates interpreted their work one way at one o'clock and directly the opposite way at seven o'clock? What does it all mean?" the LOUISVILLE COURIER JOURNAL (Dem.) wants to know. "If the language of the treaty is plain, whatever may have been the intent of those who drew it," the answer as the EL PASO TIMES (Dem.) sees it is that "America does not know what she has signed."

Behind the written text of the treaty, "left as a matter of agreed reference," as the NEW YORK TIMES (Ind. Dem.) has it, was a definite agreement which, the OMAHA WORLD HERALD (Ind.) says, "the American representatives had not confided even to the President of the United States." The "bit of this situation" to the NEW YORK HERALD (Ind.) "is in the disclosure of a lack of frankness wholly free from secret understandings which have been the curse of old-time diplomacy and which the citizenship of the world so utterly abhors." In spite of the "great show of publicity" with which the conference opened, the NEW YORK JOURNAL OF COMMERCE (Ind.) complains that "even the President was kept in the dark as to the nature of what was being done."

And the result of treating Mr. Harding "like an office boy," again quoting the NEW YORK WORLD, is that "the prestige of the conference" has been irreparably injured, for "every agreement entered into will be under suspicion. Nobody will believe that anything means what it says." Further, the ADRIAN TELEGRAM (Ind.) believes, the prestige of the American representation in the conference itself will be impaired, for other delegates "will naturally wonder in which may not be other matters in which the minds of the President and his spokesmen do not 'go along together.'"

Moreover, "the incident is most unfortunate," the PORT HURON (Mich.) TIMES HERALD (Ind.) says, "from the standpoint of the treaty's immediate success," because "if President Harding and his four delegates had deliberately tried to give the Senate irreconcilables a plausible argument upon which to have a fight, the CLEVELAND PRESS (Ind.) thinks they could not have done a better job." For "this is fat pine knots for their fire and shots for their guns," the PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER (Ind.) observes. But in the opinion of the NASHVILLE Tennessean (Ind. Dem.) and the MILWAUKEE JOURNAL (Ind.) the fight will not be confined to the irreconcilables, for, the Milwaukee paper asserts:

"To these are added Moses of New Hampshire, an irreconcilable on the League who had nevertheless taken the new treaty to his heart until this new thing was revealed, and McNary of Oregon who was only a mild reservationist on the League, is now counted an opponent. Among the Democrats Senator Hitchcock who, consistently with his fight for Article X has favored Article II, now expressed doubt."

But disquieting as the situation is, the BOSTON GLOBE (Ind.) holds that "it used to be that startling disclosures were not made until a decade or a generation after the ink on the signatures had dried. * * * Far preferable is a frankness which examines a treaty with a fine-tooth comb within a few days of its publication."

Another Plea for a United Europe

Paris—"The riots in Vienna recently were engendered by the terrible distress which is ruining not only the Austrian capital but the whole republic," says a writer in L'HUMANITE. "The treaties have created a number of little states on the borders of the Danube," he continues, "which are not able to exist. Particularly the artificial construction which for the time being is called Austria is condemned since its birth."

"Her money is worth a thousand times less than in 1914. She has debts amounting to seven hundred billions; her annual budget deficit is 168 billions. She can no longer pay her workers their indispensable indemnities for the high cost of living. Taxes have been more than tripled on food, traveling, tobacco, on all transactions. The whole economic life is becoming impossible; and as every way out closes one after the other it is not astonishing that the people give themselves up to acts of desperation."

"If we cast a glance at Germany at the present time," continues the writer, "we see numerous indications of great disorders. No doubt the gear of the Reich is less immediately threatened; no doubt the great industrial still has a certain vigor and has not yet lost all hope. But it also is threatened with formidable dangers. First of all the terribly high cost of living; what was worth 100 in 1914 was quoted 880 last May and each month the progression increases; 900 in June, 903 in July, 1,045 in August, 1,062 in September, 1,148 in October; and the figures continue to rise in bands of thousands. Food, boots, coal, all the necessities of life increase daily in value. It is impossible for the salaries of the officials and the wages of the workmen to keep up. The BERLINER TAGEBLATT says 'The catastrophe is advancing.'"

"To prevent it Lord Aberdeen, British ambassador in Berlin, suggested to Sir George Balfour, the British minister in Berlin, to see what they could do in England. And the association of British industries agreed to grant them a moratorium and open international credits for them. But, this is the way they play the good Samaritan. In privileged shares were to be created, and a mortgage would be established on the railways, canals, marine companies, and commercial enterprises and banks. These securities were to be remitted by the German government to the allied governments who could dispose of them to their countrymen."

"But even if they accepted these wonderful conditions, if they consented to make an English colony of their country, would they be saved on the other side of the Rhine? And would their proletariat accept this double servitude?"

"At any rate our leaders will hear nothing of these combinations which would upset all their financial and military plans. The Allies are trying in vain to get out of an inextricable situation."

"We shall have to break with all national egoisms," says the writer in conclusion, "with the recent past, with the inapplicable treaties, with solutions of force, with the trickery of secret diplomacy with the hatred and incitements of people to people. There should be one Europe and one harmonious work which one aim: to reunite the efforts of all to reconstruct the ruins."

World Famous Blind Man

London—Next to Helen Keller, the famous American blind deaf mute, Sir Arthur Pearson was perhaps the most remarkable victim of blindness in human history, declares the LONDON EXPRESS.

"He would greet you in a room by coming straight towards you, his hand stretched out, unerringly, his step sure and firm. He made few mistakes in the dark. He schooled himself to be sure and firm. He memorized every obstacle, every stairway, every door, every landing. The sound of the familiar pavements of London were his guide. He could tell from sound if he was near a lamp-post and Sir Arthur would be a guide, and it was seldom that he lost his way."

Old Babies

Two little girls at a tea-party, says the LONDON POST, were discussing the subject of baby brothers and sisters. "There's a new baby coming to Joan's house," said one. "Yes, it's all arranged. The person what Inder babies is there, and Joan saw her looking under the bushes in the garden." "It's high time we had a new one," responded the other. "Our old baby's nearly three; he's awfully big and breaks things, and would be cuddled or dressed up."

"Oh, those old, old babies are no good," was the critical remark of the all-wise little girl.

People are still asking "What's the Price?"

Altho the dollar so far as men's clothing is concerned has nearly finished the race of getting back to normal—people are still asking "What's the price?"

But we've found one thing; When we quote our askings—there is no hemming and hawing—the sale results quickly.

That's because our prices are right—so right that in 9 out of 10 cases our reply hits 10 to 20% UNDER the mark your own value sense had set on the article in the first place.

MATT SCHMIDT & SON

Churchman Says Open Shop Is Fraud

BY THE REV. J. A. RYAN
Professor of Moral Theology and Industrial Relations, Catholic University of America

Washington—The open shop may be a good thing or a bad thing. All depends upon the kind of open shop one has in mind.

According to the ordinary definition, the open shop is an establishment in which employees may belong to a union or remain outside it without any sort of coercion from either the employer or the union.

For purely abstract purposes this definition may be satisfactory. For practical purposes it is worse than worthless. It is positively and disastrously misleading.

Following are two practical definitions of the open shop. The first is this: An open shop is an establishment in which men are not coerced either to enter or to leave the union but in which the employer deals with the union as representing those of his employees who comprise its membership.

In this arrangement, the employer does not put pressure upon his non-union employees to join the organization while the union strives to increase its membership only by methods of persuasion.

This is the kind of open shop that was sanctioned and enforced by the National War Labor Board during the war.

LOSE ALL GAINS

Here is the second practical definition: The open shop is an establishment in which no pressure is put on employees to leave or to enter the union, but in which the employer refuses to deal with the union or its authorized representatives.

If the employer concedes collective bargaining to any group of his employees only, not as members or representatives of the union. The obvious effect of this policy is to make union membership almost, if not quite, worthless.

Why should men pay dues to the union, attend union meetings, and undergo the other inconveniences involved in union membership if they cannot use the collective power of the union to make bargains with the employer? They might as well belong to a golf club or a society for aesthetic GALLIUM FIVE advancement.

In a word, this kind of open shop permits the union to exist, but not to function.

"OPEN SHOP" A FRAUD
Now this is the kind of open shop which the "open shop movement" of 1920 and 1921 has had in mind, and has endeavored by all sorts of methods, "honest and dishonest, to popularize and to put into operation. The essential dishonesty of that movement lies in the fact that very few of its promoters and advocates ever told the public frankly that their kind of open shop would exclude collective bargaining with the union.

Some of us have recognized this pernicious feature of the movement from the beginning.

Everyone who has seen the "open shop" put into operation during the last year, especially in the building industry, has learned the true nature of the "open shop" by actual observation.

Wherever it has been formally adopted, or rather imposed during the last year the "open shop," or the "American plan," means no dealing with the union, and no adequate collective bargaining. Hence it is essentially anti-union, anti-labor and anti-social.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice, legal, medical, and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Q. How many cities have adopted a commission form of government? Has any one abandoned it after having tried it? G. H. C.

A. More than 300 cities of the United States have adopted a commission form of government, notably: Buffalo, New York; New Orleans, Jersey City; Portland, Maine; St. Paul; Oakland; Memphis; Des Moines and Galveston. Of the larger municipalities, which have adopted the plan, two, Denver and Salem, have abandoned it.

Q. What is the "life" of a magnet? H. B. F.

A. The life of a permanent magnet, magnetized in any manner whatever, has never been defined. A magnet made of the best quality of steel, properly heat-treated and aged and used under the best conditions of service would probably deteriorate only a negligible amount in the lifetime of a single observer.

Q. What are the names of the stars that form the Big Dipper? K. K.

A. The names of the seven stars in the Big Dipper, beginning at the handle are: Alkaid, Mizar, Alrith, Megrez, Thosha, Morkab and Dubhe.

Q. Is the fur of an animal kept in captivity as fine as one in the wild state? M. R. H.

A. Sometimes the fur of an animal kept in captivity is not as thick and fine as that of an animal leading a natural life. The hide of an animal artificially propagated in a climate materially warmer than its natural habitat is not so fine as that of an animal who lives under natural conditions.

Q. Why does the wall paper over a steam radiator become so much more soiled than the rest of the room? Can this be prevented? M. R. P.
A. The increased circulation of the air caused by the heat radiated from a steam radiator carries the dust from the floor to the walls adjacent to such radiator. If these walls are wiped off with a wall brush once a week it will help.
Q. When paper money is totally destroyed by fire is the government treasury enriched? G. A.
A. When paper money is destroyed by fire the United States Treasury gains since it is never called upon to redeem this paper currency.
Q. Has the pteric acid furnished to farmers by the Government proved beneficial for clearing farmers' land? C. P.
A. The Department of Agriculture says that it has received no favorable reports from farmers who have used the pteric acid for clearing land. There still remains a considerable amount of this explosive which is available for such use.
Q. What makes flowers smell sweet? J. M. T.
A. The fragrance of flowers is due to special essences or oils which the plant produces. These oils are complicated compounds of only two elements, carbon and hydrogen, and are known as volatile oils, since they escape readily into the air.

MARIE RAPPOLD, NOTED SOPRANO, HERE ON FRIDAY

Next Number of Community Series to be Presented Friday Night

Marie Rappold, celebrated soprano with the Metropolitan Opera Co. of New York, will appear in concert here next Friday evening under auspices of Appleton Community Artists and Lecture series. Mrs. Rappold is one of the best known singers in the country and is beloved by concert-goers all over the country. She has filled many important roles in opera and has appeared in many carefully prepared programs.

Her career has been unusual in that she was the first singer to appear in a prima donna role at the Metropolitan without any previous operatic experience or dramatic training, but when this young singer appeared as Sula-mith, the principal character in Goldmark's "Queen of Sheba," it was one of those sensational nights which will long be remembered. To pass from the tutelage of even so excellent a teacher as Oscar Saenger to the principal role at the Metropolitan is surely test of a great voice and courage.

Her lovely voice is shown to particular advantage in song recitals. There, stripped of helps of scenery and other aids, a voice can be best judged, and in this critical test Madame Rappold has proved her art is solid and appealing. Her tours throughout the country have been extensive and she is one of the most welcome of singers. It is a consummate proof of the musical worth of an artist when not only is she approved by the great centers of musical criticism, but by the whole country calling her back year after year, enthusiastically expressing its delight.

STATE "JEALOUS" OF PROGRAM HERE

Two Cities Want to Know How Appleton Secured Babson Speaker

Neighboring cities are somewhat jealous because Appleton is to have the privilege of hearing a speaker from Babson's Statistical Organization of Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Letters have been received by Secretary Hugh G. Corbett from Stevens Point and Neenah asking what steps were taken by the local chamber of commerce to secure a speaker from the organization. This is taken as an indication that Mr. Baldwin who speaks here Jan. 12, is bringing a message of real value and one which other communities are anxious to hear.

Mr. Baldwin will speak on "The Outlook for 1922." He will tell how his organization secures and compiles accurate figures relating to business and industry.

THE "MOTHER OF MEDICINE"

Isis, the Queen and afterwards the Goddess, was called the "Mother of Medicine." In ancient Egypt, centuries before Christ, women were skilled in medicine. They knew the great value of medicinal plants.

Hippocrates, the "Father of Medicine," many centuries later, knew less of the merit of vegetable drugs than did the women of ancient times.

Lydia E. Pinkham, nearly fifty years ago, gave to women her Vegetable Compound, now known everywhere as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This is a woman's medicine for women's ailments, prepared from medicinal plants.

$103,000 COLLECTED IN TAXES IN FIRST 2 DAYS

The receipts for the first day's collection of taxes Saturday were $89,000 and Tuesday, the second day, they were $23,000. Indications are the receipts Wednesday will be larger than the day previous. The treasurer's office is crowded from morning until night. Practically all those calling are the smaller taxpayers. So much time is taken up by persons calling for the amount of their taxes by telephone without knowing the description of their property that there is a possibility of this practice being discontinued.

PAVEMENT COST MUCH MORE THAN WAS ESTIMATED

Excess in Cost Over Estimate to be Paid From General Fund

Kaukauna.—The tarvia pavement on the south side, which was laid during the summer and autumn cost the city $21,768. A total of 18,053 square yards of pavement was completed, making an average cost of $1.20 per square yard, according to a report submitted to the council by the city engineer. This amount is somewhat higher than was estimated, due to unforeseen delay in getting materials when needed. It was estimated early in the summer the cost would probably not be much over 75 cents a square yard and it was agreed that the city would pay the difference in cost over and above 75 cents. Property owners will pay for the pavement at the specified rate and the rest of the payment will be made by the city.

The work of paving has not been entirely completed and will be continued as soon as possible in the spring. The 18,053 square yards of pavement were laid on the following streets: Crooks-ave., 3,578 square yards; Main-ave., 1,379 square yards; Second-ave., 7,400 square yards; Third-st., 4,379 square yards; Dodge-st., 745 square yards.

COULD PROSECUTE FOR SALE OF GERMAN MARKS

Madison.—Belief that a banking firm could be prosecuted for selling German marks in Wisconsin without a license from the state banking commission was expressed in an opinion given by Assistant Attorney General W. W. Gilman to Merrill Coustine, state banking commissioner.

Gilman's opinion advised that the banking commission recommendation prosecution in the district attorney of Milwaukee, where the alleged misdeed was committed.

The opinion was handed down in the case of the F. P. Warren Co., New York, which has been Milwaukee agent, A. Roelke, sold to Robert Friedrich, of Milwaukee, 50,000 German marks without the knowledge or permission of the state banking department.

"On the face of the facts it looks like a violation of the law, for which a prosecution would be liable," Gilman said in advising that the matter be called to the attention of the Milwaukee-co. district attorney.

Oshkosh is watching with interest to see how many of them will serve, because they may decline the honor if they wish. A recent state law allows them to refuse to serve, without giving a reason to the court.

Twelve of the prospective female jurors are from Oshkosh, two from Neenah, one from Rushford, and one from Omro.

U. S. SAILOR DEAD IN SHANGHAI FIGHT

Clash With Italian Sailors in Cafe Brawl Leads to Knifing Episode

Shanghai.—One American sailor is dead and four others are suffering from knife wounds Tuesday as the result of a series of street fights between Italian and American sailors here.

E. J. Reebey of the gunboat Wilmington, died of his injuries.

A brawl in a cafe, in which an Italian sailor was beaten by an American, led to general street fighting, in which parties from an Italian man-of-war hunted down isolated groups of Americans and attacked them with knives. Fifteen Americans who were badly outnumbered were injured.

Shore leave has been stopped and American authorities are investigating the disturbances.

MENASHA GUARDS FACE DISCHARGE

Menasha.—Charged with neglect of their military obligations, several members of the Menasha machine gun company of the Wisconsin National guard are facing dishonorable discharge, according to the statement of Capt. Wilbur R. Winch, recently appointed head of the local unit.

Expulsion from the national guard comes at a time when the power of discharging men for misconduct is vested in the captain of the company, the statement concludes.

Some time ago it was rumored that members of the company had appropriated military supplies for their own use.

USED 35 AUTOS FOR JOY RIDES; JAILED

Milwaukee.—An automobile accident brought to an end a 30 day "joy ride" career of two boys here Monday.

Norman Longville, 17, and John McKenna, 16, were taken into custody when the car in which they were riding crashed into another car and two motorcycle policemen came up and identified the car as belonging to Edward Milloh.

Police say the boys have used at least 35 cars during the month of December for their joy rides. They are alleged to have taken a different car each time, abandoning it after they were finished with the trip. In many cases the police say the cars were badly damaged. The value of the automobiles used, according to a summing up of police reports, was $50,000. All of the cars were recovered.

EFFORTS TO HALT FISHER TRIAL FAIL

Kenosha.—All efforts of attorneys who are defending former District Attorney Peter Fisher, Jr., on trial here on charges of bribery and malfeasance in office to have the indictments quashed, failed here on Tuesday and the court proceeded to secure a jury. Indications are that it would probably take another day before a jury could be secured.

The bitter legal battle of the day centered around the plea in bar made by the defendant based on the grounds that he was immune from prosecution since the charges were based on testimony which he had given before the grand jury. Judge Belden ruled that the objection raised might be used as a line of defense in the trial but that it was not proper cause for halting the prosecution.

CANNOT DICTATE RETAIL CHARGE

"Resale" Price Policy of Large Firms Held Unfair by Supreme Court

By United Press Leased Wire
Washington.—The government Tuesday in the supreme court won its right to knock out the "resale price maintenance policy," practiced by numerous big wholesale concerns over the country.

The court upheld the contention of the federal trade commission that this trade policy was an unfair method of competition and acted to keep prices high.

The policy which the court said the commission could prevent required retailers to sell at the prices fixed by wholesalers and prevented price cutting by threats to cut off supplies to retailers.

The court, however, held the trade commission's orders have been "too broad" and ordered them modified.

Associate Justice Holmes, McKenna and Brandeis dissented in the opinion. The case decided was brought against the trade commission by the Beechnut Packing company.

LIFE OF STATE LAWMAKER ISN'T ONE SWEET SONG

Assemblyman Catlin Tells Rotarians of Legislator's Difficulties

Duties and problems of the men who make Wisconsin's laws were described in an interesting and instructive manner by Attorney Mark S. Catlin, assemblyman from the First Outagamie county district, in an address before the Rotary club in the Sherman house Tuesday noon. Rotarians were not permitted Mr. Catlin to end his talk when the time limit expired but insisted that he continue. Mr. Catlin declared that the legislature is controlled by Nonpartisan leagues and Socialists by a narrow margin. Test votes always showed that the leagues and Socialists were in the minority by a very small number. The pressure to which legislators are submitted was described by the speaker who told of the lobbyists who besiege the capitol and the efforts that are made to influence members of the legislature. He also told of some of the "joker" bills that are introduced to catch legislators off their guard and thereby secure passage of legislation which is against the best interests of the people at large. Mr. Catlin served his first term in the legislature last year but in spite of the fact that he was without legislative experience he was a party leader and took a very active part in framing practically all of the important legislation passed at the last session.

POOR ICE HINDERS WINTER FISHING

Several Good Catches Have Been Reported on Lake Butte des Morts

Winter fishing which has been in full swing on Lake Butte des Morts for several days is now being attempted at various points along Lake Winnebago, according to reports reaching here. Thin ice, resulting from mild weather, however has hindered fishing through the ice and the work is not being carried on extensively as yet. It has been almost impossible for fishermen to reach the reefs where fishing is best, because of poor ice. On Lake Butte des Morts, fishers have erected shanties containing stoves and here their owners fish in comparative comfort. Others brave the chill winds and wait patiently while they drop their lines through a hole chopped in the ice. Catches so far have not been heavy but it is reported several fine strings of perch and pickerel have been caught. While the law is lenient toward winter fishing, the state conservation department points out a few regulations which must be observed. Single line fishing with minnows, up to five lines is permissible providing the owner personally watches them and does not leave them. Fishermen may use set lines of 25 hooks if they first secure a fishing license from the county clerk at a cost of $1.25.

ROSENBERY IS NEXT SPEAKER AT PEOPLE'S FORUM

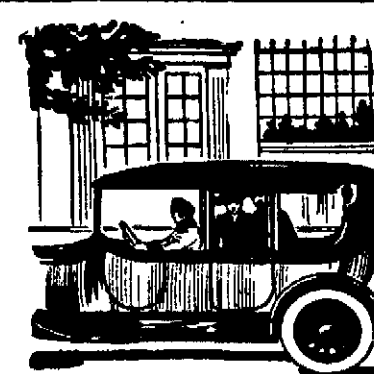

Supreme Court Justice Will Speak in Lawrence Chapel Sunday Evening

After a vacation of two weeks, the People's Forum will resume its Sunday night meetings next Sunday evening when Judge M. B. Rosenberry of the Wisconsin Supreme court speaks in Lawrence Memorial chapel on "Christian Citizenship." The meeting is to begin at 7:30 with a short musical program under the direction of Carl J. Waterman, dean of Lawrence conservatory. Judge Rosenberry is one of the most eloquent speakers in the middlewest. He speaks with a fire and force that is amazing and words literally roll from his tongue. His address before the Rotary club of Appleton two or three years ago was one of the finest ever heard in this city. Judge Rosenberry has been one of the most prominent lawyers in the state for many years. Prior to his appointment to the supreme bench he was connected with several noted cases and achieved a nationwide reputation as a lawyer. His wonderful command of English and his ability as a speaker caused him to be in great demand as a speaker. The committee in charge of the program for the People's Forum considers Judge Rosenberry as one of the feature numbers of the entire series. Admission to the lecture will be free but a silver collection will be taken to defray expenses. Collections thus far have hardly been large enough to keep the forum operating and an effort is to be made to increase them. The average cost of a lecture is $75 but collections thus far have averaged hardly $50.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Bill Bronson is guiding Virginia Tremont in her search in the Clearwater of northern Canada for her fiancé, Harold Lounsbury, who disappeared there six years previously. Her fiancé's uncle, Kenly Lounsbury, and a cook, Vosper, complete the party. Bill hopes to take advantage of the trip to seek further the lost mine of his father, who was murdered by a traitorous partner. Bill saves Virginia from drowning in the cold flood waters of Grizzly River.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

They forced their way through the evergreen thickets of the river bank, walking up the stream toward the ford. He broke through the brushy barriers with the might of his body; he made a trail for her in the snow. The darkness deepened around them. The snow fell ever heavier.

But they conquered at last. Partly by the feel under his feet, partly by his woodsman's instinct, Bill kept to the moose trail that led from the ford to the cabin. And the man was away, ing, drunkenly, when he reached the door.

"There are blankets in there, plenty of 'em," he told her. "It's my main supply cabin. Spread some of them out and take off your wet clothing and get under the covers. I'll build a fire as fast as I can."

She turned to obey. She heard him take down an ax that had been left hanging on the cabin walls and heard his step in the snow as he began to cut into kindling some of the pieces of cordwood that were heaped outside the door. She undressed quickly, then lay shivering between the warm, heavy blankets.

In a moment the man faltered in his arms heavy with wood. Then a match gleamed in the gloom. She watched him feed the fire with strange heavy motions.

She dozed off, then awakened to find him sitting on the edge of her bed, holding a cup of some steaming liquid. He put his left arm behind her and lifted her up, then fed her spoonfuls of the hot liquid. She didn't know what it was, other than it contained whisky.

"Take some of it yourself," she told him at last.

He shook his head and smiled—a wistful yet manly smile that almost brought tears to her eyes.

In the stress of that first hour after the disaster of the river, Lounsbury and Vosper had a chance to test the steel of which they were made.

For the first few seconds Lounsbury sat upon his horse and simply stared in mute horror. Then he half-remembered half-fell from the saddle, and followed by Vosper, started running down the river bank. Immediately he lost sight of Virginia and Bill. At most at once there was the wild and the darkness got into his spirit and appalled him.

"They're lost, they're lost," he cried. "There's not a chance on earth to get 'em out."

"It's a death trip. I knew it was a death trip," Lounsbury said. "And what's the use of going farther? They haven't a chance on earth."

"It ain't the first this river's taken," Vosper told him. "And they never even found their bodies."

"And we won't find these, now," Lounsbury replied. "What do you suppose we'd better do?"

"I don't know. What can we do?" "There's no chance of saving them. It seems to me the wisest thing for us to do is to go back and build a big fire—so they can find their way in if they did get out."

They did.

"Of course we'll never find the bodies," Lounsbury suggested at last. "No chance, that I can see," agreed Vosper.

"You think—" Lounsbury's voice wavered. "You think—we can get back all right ourselves?"

"Sure. That is, if we start first thing tomorrow."

They didn't try to sleep. The snow and the cold made sleep impossible.

At dawn Vosper packed the horses, slyly depositing portions of their supplies and equipment in the evergreen thickets to lighten his own work.

Then they rode away, these two worthy men, back toward the settle-ments.

III

In Virginia's first moment of waking the full dreadfulness of her situation swept her in an instant.

The cabin, she could see, was rather larger than any of those in which they had camped on their journey. It was well-chinked and sturdy and even had the luxury of a window.

Bill was stretched on the floor in the farthest corner of the room.

He gave the impression of having dropped with exhaustion and fallen to sleep where he lay.

She resolved not to call him; and in spite of her own misery, her lips curled in a half-smile.

But she was a woman, and she thought suddenly came to her that she was wholly in this man's power, shielded only by the blankets around her, unarmed and helpless and lost in the forest depths. What did she know of him? He had been the soul of respect, heretofore, but now with her uncle on the other side of the river—

Then Bill stirred in his sleep. She saw his eyes open. And his first glance was toward her.

He flashed her a smile, and she tried pitifully to answer it. "How are you?" he asked.

"Awfully lame and sore and tired. Maybe I'll be better soon. And you?"

"A little stiff, not much. I'm hard to damage, Miss Tremont. But I've overheard—and there isn't another second to be lost. I've got to dress and go and locate Vosper and Lounsbury."

"I suppose you'd better—right away. They'll be terribly distressed—thinking we're drowned."

"I'm not worrying about their distress," he told her. "I only want to be sure and catch them before they give us up for lost—and turn back."

"They'll be waiting for us, don't fear that," the girl went on. "But how can we get across?"

"That remains to be seen. If they're there to help with the horses, we might find a way."

Bill arose, stretched his sore and stiff muscles, dropped his blanket from his shoulders and went out for firewood.

He left hurriedly, and as the door opened the wind blew a handful of snow in upon her. She sat up, cold and aching in every muscle, she got up and put on some of her clothing. Then, wholly miserable and dejected, she lay down again between her blankets, waiting for Bill's return.

She couldn't interpret the expression on his face when she saw him in the doorway. He was curiously sober and intent, perhaps even a little pale. "Go to sleep, Miss Tremont," he advised. "I'll make a fire for breakfast."

He bent to prepare kindling. The girl swallowed painfully, but shaken with dread she kept her question at last. "What—what did you find out?"

He looked squarely into her eyes. "Nothing that you'll want to hear, Miss Tremont," he told her soberly. "I went to the river bank and looked across. They—they—"

"They are gone?" the girl cried.

"They are gone," he said.

"They are gone?" the girl cried.

"They are gone," he said.

(Special to Post-Crescent)
Chicago—How many words do you know?

One thousand to 5,000 if you're normal and that's enough for any purpose except cleaning a stove pipe or commenting on an income tax schedule.

Even Shakespeare knew only 25,000 and Milton fewer than half that.

But Mrs. Rose Reiter, employee of the federal bureau of internal revenue here, carries 150,000 words around in her head!

That means she could tie up a telephone line continuously for half a day, talking all the while and not repeating a single word!

Here's the secret—Mrs. Rose Reiter can speak 15 languages fluently.

Though she's potentially the "talkiest" woman in the world, Mrs. Reiter has a penchant for silence. She says:

"Talking bores me. I am most happy when silent. Words add the mind in thinking but they're a bane when used recklessly.

"The more words I learn, the more silent I become. Silence is more comforting than voluminous speech. Words are the keys to silence."

Ben Ami, Mystery Man Of Stage, Is Keeping All Broadway Guessing

Critics Cannot Agree on What They Should Think and Say About Star in Arthur Hopkins' New Play, "The Idle Inn."

By James W. Dean
By United Press Leased Wire
New York—Ben Ami—what is he? Broadway would like to know.

Ben Ami

If you read the theatrical criticisms, the only thing you'll learn for certain is that Ben Ami is an actor and that Arthur Hopkins is featuring him in "The Idle Inn," a play translated from the Yiddish of Peretz Hirshbein.

Four critics were discussing him after the first performance.

"He's a 'mugger,'" said one. "He's the greatest actor seen on the American stage since 'Mansfield,'" said another.

"I can't agree to that," said a third. "It looks to me like he's copying after Schickelgruber in 'Lilium' and making a botch of the copy."

The fourth? "I don't know what to say," he said. "One moment I think the only American actor to compare to him is John Barrymore and the next I think he is one of the worst players ever seen on the stage."

If one overdropped upon others leaving the theatre no general impression would yet be gained. There is no general impression of Ben Ami.

He is at least individual. Your eye follows him even when he is on the outer edge of the stage group, inactive. He has a commanding person. ality—none will deny that.

And what of this fellow who has the hard-boiled first-nighters in heated debate.

He is now 30 years. He began his dramatic career 10 years ago at Odessa where he founded the first Yiddish theatre in the world devoted entirely to serious drama. The czar stopped that.

He helped organize a Yiddish theatre in London. He came to America six years ago. He first came into prominence here when he became the impelling spirit of the Yiddish Art theater which held forth at the drafty old Garden theater.

"The Idle Inn" is his first play in English. In that Ben Ami is a rough horse thief who breaks up a wedding party by stealing the bride from under the very noses of the wedding guests. The girl hates him one moment and of the play is just about as uncertain loves him the next. The entire action as that—and so is Ben Ami.

Polly and Paul--and Paris

Chapter 2—If Somebody Cared

By ZOE BECKLEY

Begin Here Today

Polly Newland has reached the age of 23 without romance entering her quiet life in her Indiana home. There are few eligible men. Polly is particular and she wonders when "Mr. Right" will appear. Then Paul Dawson arrives from the east.

Go On With the Story

It was at her sister Bert's party that Polly first met Paul Dawson. He was tall and slenderly strong, with crisp hair the color of shiny golden oak, deep-set blue eyes and a jolly, boyish smile.

Polly's quick glance noted that his clothes were rather beautifully cut and fitted, immaculately pressed. So different, much her sensitive mind, from Charlie Briggs'.

Yet she felt sure there was an aggressive quality in Charlie Briggs that would earn him a million perfectly-tailored garments before this straight and supple-waisted Paul had got round to his life-work and started doing it.

"I just yanked myself out of a roff job," he was saying to Polly's brother-in-law as the four sat at dinner in Bertha's well-appointed house, "because I liked it too well. It never would have led to anything. The opportunities are all out here in the smaller places. Horace Greeley was right."

"You betcha life he was," assented their host, attacking with a large gesture the roast turkey. "The West's the place for young men. You'll do well with the Volcano Heating Company. Sims & Brady are fine fellows to work with. A corking big concern and going to get bigger. They'll treat you right. Have an other bit of dark meat—atta boy, the cook won't think you appreciate her art if you don't."

Polly loved Paul's smile as he passed his plate, noted his strong-looking, well-kept hand and the neat compliment he made to Bertha on her housekeeping.

But despite his enthusiastic responses to Bertha's husband, Polly felt that this "competent appearing Paul Dawson didn't love stoves overmuch, nor was enamored of the problems of combustion and central heating.

"It must have been mighty interesting," she said later, when they were in Bertha's proud "drawing room" and the others had been talking interminably of the advantages of Lester Falls and the Heating Company—"your working on a New York newspaper!"

He turned such an eager look upon her that she knew she had touched a vibrant chord.

"I'll say it was," he smiled away his slung. "Most fun of any work I know. Unless," he added boyishly, "it might be bossing a movie company or going out 'on location'."

Polly smiled her prettiest. "You love adventure?"

Paul saw sympathy and a bit of wistfulness in her smile. One of those swift understandings flashed between them—a sort of I-can-see-you're-kind-of-person message. But all he answered was, "Oh yes— with a little half shrug."

Polly understood. He didn't want it to get round Lester Falls that he was a wild fellow or a rolling stone. Bertha's banker husband wouldn't like it. Or the Volcano Heating Company. People had such a way of exaggerating things.

That night Polly lay awake a long time with a warm feeling round her heart that Somebody had come at last who was Her Kind!

Somebody who liked the things she liked.

Somebody who could laugh with her and be serious with her on occasion—not like Charlie Briggs who always said, "Aw, cut the highbrow stuff," or "Whif speak of love?" whenever she mentioned a book or play.

How wonderful it would be, mused Polly, as a bell somewhere far off rang midnight, if Paul should come to care for her.

What a soft, sweet bell! She had never noticed it before. She wondered if Paul heard it—

Make Turnips Tasty

THE housekeeper who must rely on root vegetables during the winter may welcome these recipes.

The winter root vegetables are richer in mineral salts than canned summer vegetables and every housekeeper should serve them often.

Instead of plain boiled turnips for dinner tomorrow, try "turnips au gratin." There is more food value in the second dish than the first wholly aside from the "tastiness" of the dish.

TURNIPS AU GRATIN

Five cups boiled diced turnips, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 cup coarse bread crumbs, 4 tablespoons grated cheese.

Put cooked turnips in buttered baking dish. Melt butter in saucepan, stir in flour and slowly add milk. Swirl with salt and pepper and cook till thick and smooth. Pour over turnips in baking dish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and cover with grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven till the cheese is melted and the whole top is a golden brown. Fifteen minutes should brown the top and melt the cheese. Serve very hot.

TURNIPS IN LEMON SAUCE

Three cups diced turnips (boiled), 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 egg yolk, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon minced parsley.

Make the sauce so it will be ready to pour over the turnips as soon as they are cooked and drained. Melt butter, stir in flour, add water slowly, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper. When the sauce boils remove from fire and stir in the well beaten yolk of an egg. Add lemon juice and parsley and pour over hot turnips. Serve at once.

The preparation of vegetables for their sauce is important. Put all root vegetables on to cook rapidly boiling water. Add salt the last half hour of cooking, one teaspoonful of salt being allowed for every four cups of vegetables.

Salt added after the vegetable is cooked does not flavor the finished dish as it does when the salt is cooked in. Do not cover root vegetables during boiling.

Another simple aid in the preparation of vegetables is a vegetable cutter. Turnips cut in neat dice or tiny balls taste much better than the same vegetable cut in "chunks."

Leftover vegetables can be most attractively worked up in salads if the vegetables are cut in fancy shapes.

WIFE, A DEMOCRAT, IS G. O. P. MAYOR'S CHOICE FOR AIDE

MR. AND MRS. LEW SHANK

Indianapolis, Ind. — Lew Shank, new mayor of Indianapolis, thinks the old adage about a prophet being without honor in his own country, is a misprint.

For, look what Lew has done! With all Indianapolis pushing candidates forward for a position on the board of park commissioners, he up and appoints his own wife.

And this in spite of the fact that she is on a different side of the fence politically.

Lew was elected on the Republican ticket. He is a Methodist. The Mrs. is a Democrat and attends the Baptist church.

But Mr. Mayor looked beyond religion and politics—he thought about the little folks of the city and the fact that they needed more playgrounds. So, as Lew puts it, he felt this way about the park board job:

"I could have appointed another woman but I know Sarah's qualifications and I know I can count on her to carry out my pledges. One of the main ones is to give playgrounds to all the kids."

As Mrs. Shank accepted the appointment she said, "I tried to get Lew to find some other woman for the place—but he wouldn't do it."

During his mayoralty campaign speeches Lew often referred to "me and Sarah."

Now Indianapolis is going to see "me and Sarah" on the job together—trying to make life brighter for the little folks.

LETTERS TO LOVERS

Something About Matches

By Winona Wilcox

HE marriage of a young man and an old woman is openly derided by everybody, but if the ages of the contracting parties are reversed, "all the world and his wife" smile in amusement.

One of the peculiar revelations of these letters is that the girl wife of an old man is not by any means as happy as she pretends to be.

Many persons doubtless would raise high this girl's chances of happiness. "My mother-in-law that I marry a man who is 20 years older than I. He is really very good looking for his age, he is extremely fond of me and very kind to my family, but I can't endure the idea of living with him the rest of my life."

"I am not yet 20 and this year I have fallen in love with a man four years my senior. My people are furious, because they have been planning this other marriage for years."

"What do you advise?"

Advice is not for an outsider to give, but perhaps the experience of a girl who has tried the experiment may prove illuminating.

"At 20 I am the wife of a man 40 years my senior. He is a liberal spender. He brings me wonderful gifts. I have a fine home, and no work to do."

"His lavish use of riches dazed me before I married him. His money took me to the most exciting places of amusement and his gifts added tremendously to my personal appearance and sometimes I think I was in love with showing off before young men rather than with the old man."

"After three years of wedded life I am soul sick. I have a darling baby girl and she is all that holds me in my husband's home."

"I suppose I am ungrateful for I have a beautiful residence and my husband is devoted to me and his child and spends most of his time trying to keep me contented."

"And I am truly sorry for him but that does not make me love him. 'I feel as if I had been cheated out of the one thing which makes life valuable, the one thing I want, and that is the love of a man nearer my own age."

"My husband's ideas weary me. His jokes make me feel hateful. Every thing he does makes me cross. He loves bridge and I loathe it."

"Oh, I'm wise to the ways of other women in my predicament. I have chances enough to flirt with handsome young men. But that is too dishonorable. I want to be worthy of my little daughter's respect when she grows up."

"But I'd like to tell the girls that it's a mistake to think that a young woman can realize her dreams of happiness as the wife of an old man. The heart of youth calls to the heart of youth—and if age alone answers her call—well—girls, it's a killing game."

Adventures of the Twins

Oliver Roberts Barton

BLOWY DISAPPEARS

"Hello, Blowy Balloon-Fish" called all the sea-gulls to the funny looking sack that the twins were following, and which had suddenly lifted itself out of the water by its fins, or wings, or whatever they were. "Hello! Out for an airing?"

"Yes and no," answered Blowy, looking below where two golden heads were gazing up at him from the water. "Some queer creatures are after me. Never saw anything like them before. Thought I knew all the Wiggleson people, but these are new ones. They've got arms like cuttlefish and they've got barrels on top of their heads, yellow and curly, you can see for yourselves and two of their swimmers have green ends, green as Lory Lobster's claws."

Nancy and Nick laughed at Blowy's description of them. "Come on, Nick," whispered Nancy, "we'll wish ourselves after him and give him another spririse."

So out popped the Twins with the aid of their magical Green Shoes, and flew right through the air after Mr. Blowy Balloon-Fish, gossiping high above the water with his friends the sea gulls.

"Look! Look!" cried Blowy when

Household Hints

Onions
Boil onions in water which has been salted. Otherwise they will lose much of their flavor.

Peeling Onions
If you hold the onion with a fork, cut off the top and bottom. The sides will fall away easily.

Fruit Pies
Brush the under crust of the pie with an egg, then put in the fruit and the juice will not soak through as it bakes.

Zinc
Zinc can be cleaned with soap suds and salt and the polish restored with kerosene.

Clothes Hint
While putting clothes away write the names of the contents on the boxes or packages. This will prevent having to open all of them before finding the one desired.

Canned Foods
When you heat canned foods empty them from the can and heat them in a double boiler. Heated in the can, even though put in water, there is often enough liquid in the can to cause enough steam for an explosion.

For Dressmakers
If you sew a great deal and make your own blouses and undergarments it would be well to cut out of cambie the one general pattern you use. This can be cut so that it fits exactly and there is no danger of its becoming torn.

he saw them coming. "Didn't I tell you they were queer? Whoever saw Wiggleson people flying?"

"But you're flying, aren't you?" called Nick. "And aren't you a Wiggleson person?"

"I'm sort of half 'n' half," said Blowy proudly. "You might say fifty, fifty. But there aren't many like me. The flying-fish are my cousins and we're the only ones who can swim and fly, too. And now will you tell me why you are following me?"

"We thought you were the Fairy Queen's bag of gold," answered Nancy. "Please, sir, what are you filled with?"

"Wind!" answered Blowy, getting suddenly thinner and sinking toward the waves. And suddenly flattening, he disappeared from view.

NEW BEAD BAGS ARE OF WOOD

By Marian Hale
New York—Still we see them, these fascinating beaded bags, and the beads are getting larger.

The newest ones are of wood—wooden balls, strung and then woven into shape.

This Erpf and Garbe bag is done entirely in black and white, conventionally designed and heavily tasseled. It gathers at the top quite like any ordinary silk bag.

And, of course, with a bag of shiny black wooden beads there could be with a different air.

So Milady's hat, an Idaira model, is done in black bagatelle with a flattering halo of burnt goose. The feathers give a softness to the general outline of the hat—a tendency of the season.

WHY WIVES ARE UNHAPPY

Washington—"I can't help feeling that women who accept this new idea of making the home secondary are the discontented women—and that they will become more discontented."

Mrs. Ethnor Talmadge says that. She's the widow of De Witt Talmadge.

"I was so proud of my husband I pitied every other woman for not having just such a husband. And I suppose most women are the same way."

Lake Shore Team Adds Bright Spots Players to Insure Victory Here

George Dame's professional basketball team will take the floor Thursday evening in Armory G with the strongest lineup of the season when it plays Two Rivers. Dame has secured the services of Mike Knapp, one of the brightest stars of the famous Milwaukee Bright Spots for the coming contest. Knapp will start at center. Ritchie and Stark will take care of the forward positions and Normington, Taylor or Waterpool at guards. The Stark, Knapp, Ritchie and Normington combination ought to prove the undoing of the Two Rivers aggregation as they have played together on the Wisconsin Rapid fives and are thoroughly acquainted with each others' style of play.

Give Whole Team For Danforth

By Billy Evans

What will Dave Danforth do for the St. Louis Browns? Danforth, as every fan knows, is the pitcher for whom the St. Louis American League club gave 11 players.

It was seven come eleven with Business Manager Bobby Quinn of the Browns before he was able to put over the deal.

Bob originally had seven players in mind, who he was willing to pass over, but Manager Rowland of the Columbus club expressed a preference for 11.

Sounds like shooting "craps" instead of a baseball deal.

Danforth, because of the unique trade in which he figured, will go down in the baseball records as the "one-man team." To secure his services the St. Louis Browns were really forced to turn over a good minor league ball club.

Bobby Quinn, who with Lee Fohl arranged the deal, has always been regarded as a foxy trader. It will be recalled that it was Quinn who sent Derrill Pratt to New York for Shocker, Gideon and a few others and a lot of cash.

What a whale of a deal that was for St. Louis! Joe Gideon proved more than a worthy successor of Pratt. Shocker is today one of the best pitchers in the game.

In his deal with New York several years ago, Quinn received a lot of players for a few. In his very latest deal he has gone to the other extreme. He gives 11 for one.

"If Danforth wins 15 ball games for the St. Louis Browns, I figure it will be a great deal from a St. Louis standpoint," says Quinn.

FOHL IS CONSERVATIVE

"If Danforth can win me a dozen ball games, I will be satisfied," says Fohl. "The players we have included in the deal should go big in the minors, but I don't believe I could figure on all of them turning in more than 12 wins."

The fact that Danforth has had two trials in the American league is what caused the trade to be so widely discussed. A lot of the critics figured St. Louis was taking a long chance on a pitcher who had twice failed.

Charley Herzog, once a big league star, played in the American association with Danforth last year. I asked Herzog at the New York meeting what he thought of Danforth's chances.

"I am sure he will help St. Louis," said Herzog. "He has a great fast ball. He is almost overhead when pitching against right-handers, and is constantly sidestepping the left-handers. He gets a hop on his fast ball that is most puzzling. If Fohl will be satisfied with a dozen games won from Danforth he can count on that many right now."

In the American league when Danforth was with Chicago he was viewed with suspicion by opposing batters. In the language of the players, Dave was a "cheater."

That means he doctored the ball in various ways to get the hold hop on his fast one.

Despite this belief on the part of the players American league umpires were ever able to find anything wrong with his delivery. Danforth has very long fingers and a good sized hand. He can almost encircle the ball. This enables him to get unusual purchase on the ball to get unusual accounts for the "zip" on his fast one.

So says Garry Herrmann, the president of the Cincinnati club, is the first one to come to bat on the subject. While the magnates were convening in New York, Herrmann told the world what he thought about Rousch's demand.

"Rousch will neither be sold nor traded," says Garry. "No matter how many clubs are anxious to get him. His demands are out of proportion with the earnings of the club. We intend placing Rousch on our voluntarily retired list. He will stay on his farm, if he expects us to pay such a salary. That is why we secured George Burns, knowing we would have trouble with Rousch."

So says Garry Herrmann, and he usually means what he says. All of which brings us back to the fact that the wisdom of Ban Johnson is again being felt.

Three or four years ago Mr. Johnson said disgruntled players should be forced to play with their clubs, or stay at home. However, Mr. Johnson's advice was disregarded, much to the detriment of the game.

The Cincinnati star asks for $45,000 a year, with a three-year contract. The demands of Ruth, Hornsby and Rousch are the result of the wide publicity that has been given the alleged profits in baseball.

SAUDY SURE TO GIVE HILL STIFF BATTLE TONIGHT

Big Minnesota Swede is Tough Customer — Sanders Describes His Strength

Hardly rested from his exertions last Wednesday night, George Hill, Wisconsin's wrestling champion, tackles another stiff proposition tonight when he goes on the mat with Alex Saudy, the smiling Swedish giant, in Armory G. Alex, who hails from St. Cloud, Minn., is no mere baby weighing about 215 pounds and is as strong as they make 'em. According to Elmer Sanders, who ought to know, Hill has his job cut out for him tonight.

The main battle is to begin shortly after 8 o'clock. It promises to be fully as interesting as the last three bouts in the local arena and fans can hardly expect to see anything better any place. Alex is no novice at the wrestling game. He has been at it for several years and out in Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas they think he is going to be the champion some day.

HILL IN FINE SHAPE

Sanders, who lost to Hill here last week after a grueling fight, says Saudy is the strongest man he has ever met. He is not a speed king in the ring but he is so strong that he cannot be forced into a fall. He can pick up the ordinary wrestler and carry him all over the ring if he tries to clamp on a hold.

Hill is in perfect shape for the match. He has been training faithfully and keeps himself in good condition. He also has taken the precaution of looking up Saudy's record and found that he isn't a wrestler to be taken lightly.

Judging from the general atmosphere the bout will be a good one and should provide plenty of excitement. It is reported from Green Bay that Tom Condon, a Green Bay wrestling impresario, is putting Carl Zoll through a course of training and hopes to match the Bay giant with Hill or Sanders in the near future.

Wilson's title isn't much use.

By United Press Leased Wire New York—Without a place to use it, Johnny Wilson's midweight title will turn out about as useful to him as snow shoes in Panama.

New York is the latest state to decree "we can't use you, John." Three other states have declared quarantine against him and practically nothing remains now but the small time where the champion will hear talk in dollars instead of thousands.

Wilson has been out of luck since he won the title from Mike O'Dowd and his championship career has been one mess after another.

In many cases, the crossed fingers which wag at the mention of the midweight king's name are justified but in the present case there are two sides to the story.

In announcing his intention to run out of a contract with Tex Rickard to meet Harry Glick, the Pittsburgh pugilist, Wilson was making what may prove a foolish attempt to get even with Rickard.

LEONARD WON'T FIGHT DUNDEE IN MILWAUKEE

By United Press Leased Wire Chicago—Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard was on his way to New York Wednesday after declaring the bout with Johnny Dundee, announced for Milwaukee, Jan. 12, had been called off.

Benny wants this fight staged in the east.

Meanwhile, the Wisconsin boxing commission had ordered Pinky Mitchell to appear for investigation next week, following cancellation of the bout with Leonard last Monday.

Pinky's lame shoulder, doctors stated Wednesday, would not permit him to box for another ten days. He still has up a $1,000 forfeit for a match with Leonard.

WON'T PERMIT COW TO MIX IN "BULL FIGHT"

New York—Police Wednesday announce the proposed bullfight which was to have been staged in Madison Square garden cannot be held because it was discovered the bull was a lady quadruped named Emma.

Boy Scout Cage Team Whips Milwaukee's Best

Boy Scout Troop 2 basketball team has after a 5-day trip in which it played scout troop teams in Milwaukee and Wauwatosa. The local quint played four games and was the victor in all contests, outplaying contenders for the Milwaukee title in their class.

On Wednesday evening Troop 2 defeated the Wauwatosa Badgers 34 to 8. Ashman was the high point winner in this contest, netting five baskets and four free throws. Thursday evening the Kenwoods, a fast east side Milwaukee team, fell before the Appleton scouts, 34 to 21. "Stew" Mills featured in this contest, scoring six field goals. On Friday evening the All Saints Cardinals, runners up in the 69 inch championship of Milwaukee were humbled, 35 to 19, in a rough one-sided contest. Zussman was the star of this encounter, netting seven markers.

The feature game of the trip was played Saturday night with Boy Scout Troop 28 of Milwaukee as the opposition. This team is the strongest scout five in the Cream City. The defense perfected by the local five was unbreakable. Only once did Milwaukee team get close shots and these were missed. The first half ended 21 to 0 in favor of the locals. The final score was 37 to 4. Sensational shots from the middle of the floor by members of the Appleton five brought the crowd to their feet with applause time after time.

Troop 2 has played six games thus far this season and won all of them. They have scored 190 points to their opponents' 69.

The troop lineup: Zussman and Mills, forwards; Ashman, center; Heideman and Verwey, guards; Stillman and La Rose, utility men.

BLACK CREEK TOO MUCH FOR MILLMEN

Villagers, Loaded With Stars, Run Away With Interlakes in Armory G

The Interlake Pulp and Paper company basketball five was humbled by the Black Creek Merchants, 43 to 27, in a loosely played contest in Armory G Tuesday evening. The millmen played a poor passing and did not have any defense against the Merchants who scored at will. The Black Creek aggregation had strengthened their lineup with Zick and Kuehl of the Twin City Boosters. These men were the main cogs in the Merchants' machine. Zick scoring seven field goals and three free throws while six markers were counted by Kuehl, whose work at guard was the best on the floor Tuesday evening.

Kessler and Rock did good work for the millmen but did not seem to have an eye for the net. Gregory, regular center, was out of the game because of injuries.

The lineup: Interlakes—Day and Baetz, forwards; Rushon, center; Kessler and Rock, guards.

Black Creek—Zick and Marlow, forwards; Smith, center; Kuehl and Mueller, guards.

Substitutions—Hunt for Baetz.

BOSTON AMAZON WOULD BOX FRENCH CHALLENGER

Boston—Will somebody please page Miss Jeanne La Mar, who recently arrived in the United States with a challenge to any and all women pugilists?

"Miss Adele" of Boston wants to put on the gloves.

Miss Adele, as she prefers to be called, wants to know where Mme. La Mar gets that stuff and is anxious to defend the reputation of the American womanhood with a knock-out like that with which Mr. Dempsey prevailed over M. Carpentier.

For three years the Boston challenger has been following boxing and wrestling, not only as a spectator but as a participant. She has been working out at Al Delmont's Hanover street gym, where many boxers in training have agreed she packs a wallop more powerful even than a shot of moonshine at any Hanover street bar.

When not boxing, Miss Adele is an attractive typist. She is young and weighs 135 pounds—ringside.

FASTEST QUADRUPED IN WORLD

TOMMY, AND FIGURES SHOWING WHAT HIS SPEED RIVALS CAN DO

Even Man o' War, the fastest race horse that ever trod the turf, could not have overtaken Tommy.

Tommy weighs but 17½ pounds. His muscles, however, are long, sleek and hard. In proportion to his weight they are tremendous and hurl his little body through the air like a shot.

Tommy, in common with all whippets, originated from cross between an Italian greyhound and an Irish terrier. From the greyhound, of course, he gets his long legs and his speed. And from his Irish ancestor he gets his gameness.

Tommy is owned by James Gilligan of Lawrence, who values him at more than $2000. No kennel for Tommy. His abiding place is the parlor with the rest of the family.

Tommy is a vegetarian. During the week before a race, however, Gilligan feeds him just a little meat "to put pep in him."

He is hardly ever permitted to run except when he is racing. Gilligan has bred whippets for 30 years.

Tommy is a whippet—the champion whippet. Unofficially he has run 200 yards in 12 seconds. But his record is 200 yards in 12.15 seconds, achieved recently at Westbury, L. I.

In making his new record, Tommy scurried over the cinder path faster than any other living creature in all the world has ever run.

He ran almost twice as fast as Charlie Paddock, holder of the world's record for the 100-yard dash could have made the distance.

Tommy is a whippet—the champion whippet. Unofficially he has run 200 yards in 12 seconds. But his record is 200 yards in 12.15 seconds, achieved recently at Westbury, L. I.

In making his new record, Tommy scurried over the cinder path faster than any other living creature in all the world has ever run.

He ran almost twice as fast as Charlie Paddock, holder of the world's record for the 100-yard dash could have made the distance.

FOREIGN TOILERS THINK MORE ABOUT WORLD RELATIONS

Europeans Have Greater Interest in World Affairs Than Americans Show

By Whiting Williams
 Cleveland—What does the common laborer over there in Europe think of his job—of his boss? How does he feel about his government or his king—or his country?

How does he feel about his friends who have gone over to seek their fortunes with Uncle Sam? Is he better off than they? Is the H. C. L. hitting him harder than them?

How friendly is he to Old John Barleycorn?

Does he hide or fear his fellow laborers across the line now that he isn't shooting at them any more?

Is he hoping for a chance to shoot at them any more?

Is he hoping for a chance to shoot at them again?

Or is he keen on the League of Nations and the president's conference?

I have been trying to dig out the answers to these questions with a pick and shovel the past months in France, Belgium and Germany. This pick and shovel method of making the other fellow's acquaintance is strenuous and uncomfortable. But it is about the only dependable way.

LANDS IN BOARDING HOUSE
 I landed last July in a workman's boarding house in Douai, a big manufacturing town in the northern corner of France. Two Germans had arrived so early in October, 1914, that they captured a lot of French fighters besides all the rest of the population. For four years everybody was a prisoner.

After laboring there in a steel plant, I visited the coal mines of Lens, destroyed by the effort of the invaders to put France forever out of the running as an industrial competitor. A few days later good luck brought a job nearly 2000 feet down in a big coal mine four of five miles from Lens and only three or four miles from the old front-line trenches. Of course the job gave me a chance to get out of the mine room and beat with a number of my miner "buddies."

Lille, one of France's great manufacturing towns, and the near-by textile centers of Roubaix and Tourcoing, now the home of much industrial unrest, furnished easy and interesting steps into Belgium.

VISIT KRUPP PLANT
 There, in the Ruhr, Brussels and its labor leaders, the mine town of Charleroi where men work more than 3000 feet below surface and the coal, steel and machinery centers of Liege, offered a good route into the huge Krupp factory at Essen, the center of the Ruhr district.

After that my inquiries took me through Cologne and Coblenz into what has been called "the hot spot of Europe." That is the Saar Basin which was taken from Germany and is now ruled by the League of Nations. In its mines I worked with the Germans who are now, strangely enough, employees of the French.

The upshot of all the experiences, observations and conversations in three languages in five countries is something like this:

One—Jules, the Frenchman or Belgian, and Heinie, the German, have very much the same line of troubles as Frank, their American fellow-worker. Most of these troubles come from the war-baby known as the high cost of living.

Two—Jules and Heinie are a lot more touchy and distrustful of their fellow citizens—especially their more prosperous fellow citizens and political leaders—than Frank here. That's because they are much more weary from war labors than Frank.

Three—Jules and Heinie understand a lot better than Frank that they can't have good steady jobs unless their own and every other country is getting along pretty well with its neighbors.

Four—They accordingly think a good deal more about such things as politics, history and international relations because they believe that these things have a good deal to do with their jobs. They have their eye on the League of Nations and the president's conference considerably more than Frank has.

What Day of the Month Will Two Weeks from Next Wednesday Be?

You don't know! And it may be necessary to know. Have you any ink out? You can laboriously count up on your fingers, with a good chance of making a mistake. Or are you can have a calendar hanging on the wall, and see at a glance.

Which is the better way?

Any reader can secure a copy of the Navy calendar, free, which is decorated by a Leyendecker picture in colors, by sending in his name to our Washington Information Bureau, accompanied by two cents in stamps for return postage. Write name and address clearly.
